The following challenge may be of interest to you:

CA4Health Racial Equity and Social Justice Challenge

What is the 21-Day Challenge?
CA4Health challenges you to make daily time and space to build more effective social justice habits - particularly those dealing with issues of race, power, privilege and leadership - for 21 days.

Participants who have signed up for the challenge will receive daily tasks via email to help foster their understanding and awareness, including activities such as:

- Reading an article
- Watching a video
- Reflecting on personal experience.

Participation in an activity like our 21-Day Challenge helps us to discover how racial inequity and social injustice impact our community, to connect with one another and identify ways to dismantle racism and other forms of discrimination.

The challenge will begin September 14, 2020.

How do I know if I am up for the Challenge? This challenge was created to be for anyone interested in learning, analyzing, and reflecting more about racial equity and examining these issues in our own communities—whether you consider yourself an ally, advocate, or an interested community member. This challenge is for you.
NOTE: Most of the videos have a closed caption option, but we don't currently have the capacity to offer transcription or sign language service during the optional, live discussions groups. Please contact us with any questions.

What is racial equity?
It is both an outcome and a process. As a process, we apply racial equity to policies, systems, structures and institutions by analyzing data so we can identify, uncover and remove barriers that produce disparate (unfavorable) outcomes based on race. As an outcome, racial equity is the condition that would be achieved if one's racial identity no longer predicted, in a statistical sense, how one fares in society.
